901:1-5-12 outlines testing standards of Brucella canis. The rule outlines the acceptable types of tests as well as the entities which may perform the tests. Further, the rule outlines three types of Brucella canis classification: positive, suspect, and negative. The rule requires that upon the diagnosis of either a Brucella canis positive or suspect that the animal be quarantined until further testing. Additionally, the rule outlines potential restrictions on the movement of animals which are positive or suspect.

The rule has been amended to remove the canine antibody test (more commonly referred to as the "card test") and the polymerase chain reaction test (PCR) as accepted tests for Brucella canis. Through independent verification by the Department these tests have been found to be unreliable in the testing of Brucella canis. In addition, the rule has been amended to update the process from being released from quarantine. Animals which successively test negative to a brucella canis test at least sixty days apart can be properly determined to be free of Brucella canis.

OAC, any canine that is diagnosed as Brucella canis suspect or positive will be subject to immediate quarantine. Further, there is a possibility that their facility or farm also be quarantined.
